Subject: Price Increase Announcement

Many industries continue to be impacted by escalating costs and global supply chain challenges. We continue to experience rising costs on many commodity-based raw materials, freight, and electronics, and face other inflationary pressures as well.

Therefore, we are announcing the following:

Effective February 7, 2022, a general price increase will be applied to most of our product families across our brands. Specific price increase amounts will vary by product family. Updated stock price sheets will be available prior to the effective date of the increase. The last day for the release of orders at current prices is February 4, 2022.

Acuity Brands remains committed to supporting our relationship, providing open communication, and continuing to deliver industry leading solutions and services. Despite the headwinds our industry is facing, we are working diligently to deliver the service levels and product availability needed to meet the business needs of the marketplace.

As a reminder, we can offer a multitude of product options to meet requirements on projects where lead times are critical, given the breadth and depth of our portfolio across product families and brands.

Thank you for your continued business and support as we navigate these challenging times together.

Best Regards,
